Leave Interstate 80 at Exit 60
(Dubuque Street interchange).

Follow Dubuque 1.6 miles south to Church Street.

At left as you enter Iowa City are the May Flower Apartments, a privately operated apartment building for 1,000 residents. At right is the Iowa River and beyond it is City Park. Also across the river is the University's Hancher Auditorium and Music Building.

Right on Church to Clinton Street (one block).

The brick house on the right is provided for the use of the president of the University.

Left on Clinton to Washington Street (seven blocks).

On the right are four University residence halls 1 —housing approximately 3,000 students. The basic living and governing unit in these residence halls is the "floor" of about 60 persons. The liberal arts and administrative core of the Iowa campus is on your right after the first traffic signal (Jefferson Street). On your left is Phillips Hall 2, which houses the College of Business Administration. The gold-domed building on your right at the next traffic signal (Iowa Avenue) is Old Capitol 3, last capitol of the Iowa Territory (1842-46) and first capitol of the State of Iowa (1846-57), and since then the landmark building and symbol of The University of Iowa. The building has recently been restored and will be open to the public beginning July 3, 1976. Most of the interior has been restored to its earliest years. Old Capitol will be open to the public 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. Closed on holidays. There is no admission fee.

Right on Washington to Madison Street (two blocks).

On your right are Schaeffer and MacLean Halls, which house departments of the College of Liberal Arts. In MacLean Hall, Dr. James Van Allen and his associates designed and built the cosmic ray experiment which went aloft in this country's first satellite in January, 1958. Explorer I and later satellite experiments, also prepared in this building, led to the discovery of the Van Allen radiation belts.

On your left as you descend the Washington Street hill are the Engineering Building 4 and the central Library 5. There are more than two million volumes in the University's library system.

Right at the foot of the hill and north on Madison Street—now a decision!

- A. To continue your tour of the campus without stopping, turn left at the first intersection (Iowa Avenue).
- B. To visit the Museum of Natural History, Old Capitol, and the Iowa Memorial Union (snack bars, restrooms, etc.), continue north on Madison one and a half blocks to the parking ramp 6 .

The Iowa Memorial Union 7 is across Madison Street from the parking ramp. University guests are welcome to use these facilities. To visit the Museum of Natural History, walk out the east end of the parking ramp onto Capitol Street and a half-block south to Jefferson (or, from the Union, walk east on Jefferson to the top of the hill at the Capitol Street intersection), cross to the south side of Jefferson Street and enter Macbride Hall 8 . The museum contains exhibits of bird and animal life from around the world. It is open ordinarily on Saturdays and Sundays, although it may be closed on weekends when University classes are in recess. Hours are 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 1-4 p.m. Sunday. Closed on holidays. There is no admission charge. Old Capitol is near the southwest corner of Macbride Hall. The public entrance is on the east side of the building.

If you chose Alternative A (or are on your way again, having made your way back to the Madison Street, Iowa Avenue intersection):

West on Iowa Avenue.

The University's Television Center is located in the older building on the left. The University does not have a station on the air, but has excellent facilities for the teaching of television.

To the left past the underpass is the English-Philosophy Building 9 .

The Iowa River divides the 900-acre main campus. The water level is controlled by the Coralville Dam immediately north of Iowa City.

Continue straight ahead through intersection at far end of bridge and up the hill on Newton Road to Woolf Avenue.

You are approaching the University's Health Center, where medical, nursing, dental, and pharmacy students are educated and where hundreds of thousands of patients are treated each year. Straight ahead is the Basic (medical) Sciences Building 10 , which provides classroom and laboratory space for more than 5,000 students. As the road curves right, the College of Nursing Building 11 is on your right. At left is Children's Hospital. On the right beyond Nursing is Westlawn, which houses a variety of units related to medicine. Around the curve Psychiatric Hospital is on the right. Across the street from Psychiatric is General Hospital 12 . On your right is the Health Sciences Library 13 . The building beyond the library is the 13-story Veterans Administration Hospital 14 , whose staff works closely with the University medical faculty.

Straight ahead is the varsity baseball field and beyond it the Recreation Building 16 .

After completing the curve to the left, the building ahead of you is the Hospital School for physically and mentally handicapped children.

After following the curve to the right, the Speech and Hearing Center 17 is on your left. At the top of the hill, the main entrance of the General Hospital can be seen to the left rear. Close by on your right is an air-conditioning facility for the health campus. Also on your right is Kinnick Stadium, where 60,000 fans can watch the Iowa Hawkeyes play football.

Turn left on Melrose (at tennis courts).

On your left is the Armory and the University Field House 18 , which seats 13,500 for basketball and is the site of commencements.

To the left and right are four University residence halls 19 which house nearly 2,000 students. To the right at the foot of the hill is Iowa's world-famous Hydraulics Research Laboratory.

Left onto Riverside Drive. Keep in the right-hand lane through the next intersection and past the second traffic signal (where Highways 6 and 218 curve to the left), and continue straight ahead one mile to Park Road.

A view of the Old Capitol, Iowa Memorial Union, and Danforth Chapel is on the right, across the river. To the left front at the second traffic signal is the College of Law 20 . As you continue north on Riverside Drive through another underpass, the Iowa Center for the Arts is on your right along the river. First is the Art Building, then the Museum of Art 21 , which houses the Owen and Leone Elliott collection, works by School of Art and Art History students and faculty members, the University's collection, and traveling exhibits. Museum hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday. Closed on holidays. Admission is free. Visitors may park in the lot across Riverside Drive from the museum, or in the University Theatre lot to the north. The theatre is next on your right. It is followed by another view of the Music Building and adjoining Hancher Auditorium 22 . Projecting toward the street from the Music Building is Clapp Hall, a 720-seat performance facility. Hancher Auditorium seats 2,680 for music and dance concerts, and plays. Auditorium tours are conducted Sundays and Wednesdays at 2 p.m. free of charge.

Right (east) on Park Road.

On your left is City Park 23 , with a public swimming pool, picnic grounds, restrooms, and children's amusement areas. There is ample space for rest and recreation before continuing your trip.

To return to Interstate 80, continue east across the Park Road bridge, turn left on Dubuque Street and follow signs to Interstate 80 east or west.

You've had a quick glimpse of The University of Iowa, which enrolls one-fourth of all the students in Iowa's four-year colleges and universities and covers many fields of knowledge in its ten colleges: Liberal Arts, Business Administration, Dentistry, Education, Engineering, Graduate, Law, Medicine, Nursing, and Pharmacy. Come back whenever you can to see more of the University and the friendly Iowa City community in which it makes its home.
